Dear Angel ever at my side, how loving must thou be,
 to leave thy home in heaven to guide a little child like me.
 Thy beautiful and shining face I see not, though so near;
 the sweetness of thy soft low voice I am too deaf to hear.
 And when, dear Spirit! I kneel down both morn and night to prayer something there is within my heart which tells me thou are there.
 O when I pray, thou prayest too; thy prayer is all for me;
 but when I sleep, thou sleepest not, but watchest patiently.
 Then for thy sake, dear Angel! now, more humble will I be:
 but I am weak, and when I fall, oh, weary not for me:
 Then love me, love me, Angel dear, and I will love thee more;
 and help me when my soul is cast upon the eternal shore.

 Angel of Happy
 Meetings

Do we think that achieving holiness was easier for the saints “because they were saints?” Some Resolutions and Reflections of Saint Anthony Mary Claret

... I resolve to keep an even temper and disposition, never allowing myself to be carried away by anger, impatience, sadness, or exaggerated joy, always remembering the example of Jesus, Mary, and Joseph, who also had their trials, and far greater ones than mine. I will think that God has arranged things this way for my own good, and so I will not complain. Rather, I will say, "Thy will be done."

... I will continue my particular examen on meekness. I realize that it is better to do less, in a spirit of meekness, than to do more in haste and ungraciously. People are very disedified by the latter, and so I have resolved never to get angry or complain about anything. I will be amiable with everyone, even those who annoy me . . .

... I will hold the virtue of everyone else in high esteem. I will think the best of all they do, and I will reserve my reproofs, censures, and judgments for my own actions. This course of action will benefit me; the opposite would not. . .

... My greatest struggle is with eating. My body is like a stubborn mule that often conquers and mocks me. It is hungry when it sees food. I make it fast three times a week. Every day of the year I forbid it to eat meat or fish, even on major feast days. But I see to it that these dishes are prepared for the others in the house. They eat them, but I do not. For the body this is the torment of Tantalus. I do the same with regard to wine. . . . The body conforms, although this takes a little work. It always wants more than I'm willing to give it, and at best it makes me commit the fault of taking a little more than I'd planned. I have a worse fault than this, namely, I eat faster than I want to and resolved to. Because I am served first, and take only potatoes and greens, while the others are served after me and take what they please, it naturally takes them more time to eat what's on their plates. I want to slow down my eating so that we finish at the same time, but there's the rub. Because I am served earlier and have nothing to carve up, and because I have a hearty appetite besides, I can't hold back that little mule of a body, and so it breaks loose and I end up eating faster than I'd planned. . . I practice abstinence for a good number of reasons: 1) to mortify my body, 2) to edify my neighbor - as I know we must nowadays, 3) to be less of a burden to my neighbors as a guest, 4) to economize so that I'll have more to give away.

O Raphael, lead us towards those we are waiting for, those who are waiting for us! Raphael, Angel of happy meetings, lead us by the hand towards those we are looking for! May all our movements, all their movements, be guided by your light and transfigured by your Joy.

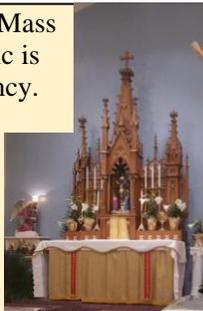

Angel guide of Tobias, lay the request we now address to you at the feet of Him on whose unveiled face you are privileged to gaze. Lonely and tired, crushed by the separations and sorrows of earth, we feel the need of calling to you and of pleading for the protection of your wings, so that we may not be as strangers in the province of Joy, all ignorant of the concerns of our country. Remember the weak, you who are strong--you whose home lies beyond the region of thunder, in a land that is always peaceful, always serene and bright with the resplendent glory of God. Amen.
